PIN: Waiting Gets You Nowhere

I'd sit in my room, watching the snow fall on my already frozen windowsill. It'd probably freeze my fingers if I touched it. I need to help with something, I've been slacking off on my work for a while now. I'm so lost in my thoughts now. Maybe it's because of how clingy SHE'S been acting lately. I'll never know.. or maybe I will.. it just takes time, thats what Coiny says to me atleast. I can never tell if he's spitting lies. He wouldn't do that, right? It seems like you can't trust anyone anymore. I'd sit up from my desk, accidentally spinning in my chair as I fell out of it.

"..Ow!" I'd yelp, sighing as I stood up. Catching my balance. Where to go next? That's a hard question. Maybe I could just walk around downstairs for now, but that's boring. I don't just.. want to walk around with no purpose! Maybe I could make.. some flowers.. plant some, I mean.. but would they even grow in this weather? No, probably not. It's been so cold recently, but what am I supposed to expect from 'eternal winter'? Whatever. I'd drift towards the door, grasping the handle and slowly walking out of my room. Whipping my head both ways, if we are being perfectly honest. I didn't want to really talk right now. I would begin my walk downstairs, peering over the stair rail before I continued to climb down. No one was in the living room specifically, but I could hear soft and fuzzy speaking from around the corner. Maybe in the kitchen? I could just avoid going there, but that'd be mean. I'd trip on the last step, barely catching my balance before I fell face first on the wooden floor. Leafy and Golfball were in there, you could smell food cooking.. at this hour? They usually don't make dinner until.. 7:00pm. Oh well, maybe it was something that had to be prepared beforehand, but with our scarce resources? Yeah, right. Usually the only thing we got was like.. soup, or rice. It always tasted so bland, we never had salt or anything either.. no spices, no anything at all. I'd sigh, taking a deep breath before entering the kitchen. Maybe I could just act like I'm getting a snack or something, and they'd both leave me alone. That's never the case though.

"..You trust ME?! Well- I-I'm so glad! And.. of course, proud that you would trust me with this job! Thank y- Oh! Pin! Hello!" I could hear Leafy's voice immediately as I took a step in there. I'd begin to sweat a bit. Do I really have to interact with her now? Ugh. I'd stare at Golfball, then Leafy.

"Hi, Leafy." I'd say with a smile, a bit of an annoyed tone coming out as I spoke those words. Hopefully that didn't sound TOO mean. Golfball raised an eyebrow at your response to Leafy, but let out a sigh. "..I'll see you in a moment, Leafy." Golfball would say in a monotone voice before finding her way out of the kitchen. I'd walk over to the cabinets, attempting to ignore Leafy's gaze. "..So, how are you? Everything okay? Oh, also! I have BIG BIG NEWS!!" Leafy would speak in a rushed voice, walking over to my side with a kind grin. "..I'm fine, what's your news? I'd love to know!" As a matter a fact, I didn't want to know. I really just wanted to get out of this kitchen as fast as I could. "..Well.. so, you know how the hosts and stuff.. aren't really- well.. doing their jobs? Like.. Two! Uhm.. whatever's up with them and staying in their bed, BUT! Hehe- Golfball needs more help um.. around the cabin and stuff- so! She asked me to be apart of.. her new staff thing! Isn't that EXCITING, Pin?! I'm so excited to finally feel in charge a little bit!" Oh god, HER wanting to be in charge? I could've filled that role any day! But GB probably doesn't see me as 'fit' to fill a leader role. Coiny tells me I have ALL the good qualities. So what's with this?! Whatever. Just shove it off, Pin. I'd turn to her with an annoyed grin on my face.

"Really? Well.. that's just.. great!" Leafy would stare confused, like she caught onto your sarcasm. "..You don't sound.. excited about it. Pin, you know being sarcastic isn't very nice!" Really? Does she always call people out on this stuff? God. "..Wha-? Sarcasm? Well- I barely know her! Ha-ha.. uhm.. well, in all seriousness.. I'm just having a rough day, it's.. nothing though, I promise." Leafy would frown, putting a hand to my shoulder. I'd freeze at her touch. "..Well, you know.. I'm here for you, like.. if you need to talk.. I wouldn't mind helping you!" I could see her blushing faintly, she does that a lot around me. Does she have a crush on me or something? I mean— I wouldn't be surprised. I'm kinda awesome- but not to get too full of myself. "..I do know that. But, really.. I'm fine. I don't need to talk to anyone, right now." I'd smile, dismissing her in a way. "..Oh! Okay.. um.. you know, do you want to hang out later? I am free.." Leafy would grab my hands in hers without permission. She did it rather quick too, her hands were so cold.. I REALLY didn't wanna hang out with her. But I'd feel like a total jackass for saying no. "..I guess..! I should be free too. We can meet in my dorm later!" Leafy nodded, giving my hands a squeeze before letting them go. They'd fall to my side as she ran off. Huh, what was she in such a rush for?

I'd hear a faint knock on my door, the person letting themselves in. It was Leafy. I'd sit up from my bed, smiling at her. "..Hi, Leafy! Sit anywhere.." Leafy would grin at me, sitting next to me on my bed. Uncomfortably close. Oh Jesus.. get away please. I'd sweat a bit, gritting my teeth in a nervous way. "How's your relationship with Coiny?" Leafy would say bluntly. That was random, really random. I wasn't even dating him anymore. "..It's fine, if you mean as friends of course." I would look back towards the window, placing my hands on my lap. "..Oh really? Well, I meant as romantic partners. You guys still seem like you're dating— not in a bad way, but.. you're still so buddy buddy with each other!" I'd sigh, glaring at her as she said that. So many people have said that, I still feel like an ass for breaking up with him. But who would've thought I would start liking girls and go on to have a full on relationship with a few others. "..Yeah, I know. He's just a friend though. I promise you." Leafy seemed to light up at that. "..A friend, huh? Well! Thats something." Her eyes would drift around my room, I'd lean against the wall behind my bed. "..How's Firey?" I'd ask, I needed to ask. Firey was apparently isolating because it was hard for him to get around in cold weather without hurting himself or hurting someone else, Leafy was the main one checking up on him, but when she's alone with people she can be quite the devil.. atleast when she gets upset sometimes. Leafy seemed to pause at that, staring down at her hands. "..He's fine. Just.. he's in a bit of a bad place right now, but I'm helping him! He'll be okay in no time!" Yeah, right. Lie after lie. He can't just get better that fast! Ugh. "..Oh really? And you're the only person who's.. checking up on him, right? That's a big deal. He's probably sick from staying in that room. Literally and mentally." Hopefully that wasn't a smartass-y.. response. That would be bad. I could see her eye twitch as her gaze turned a bit.. sinister, but eventually returned to normal.

"..No, he's fine. I can handle it. He's not even messed up that bad, okay? His business is none of yours." Leafy would reply defensively. Which made me take a HUGE step back. "..Sorry for asking." I'd say through gritted teeth. Watching her expression return to a more saddened and soft one. "..No- no need to apologize! It's fine! It's MY fault for getting irritated." She'd raise a hand in a very apologetic way. "..It's fine." Id sigh, taking her hand and rubbing it. Leafy would blush at the act, and I could see it. She'd then speak again.

"..Pin?" Leafy spoke, her words came out very hesitant. "..Yeah?" I'd be a bit confused, what was she gonna ask me now. I didn't expect what she was gonna do though- I couldn't let another thought out before she pulled me close and kissed me. I'd blush, my eyes going wide. What the hell? I mean that in a good way- but.. wow? This was so.. sudden. She'd let go, looking away with a flustered expression. "..I'm sorry! I-I.. just.. um.. I really REALLY like you if that wasn't obvious, Pin. Um.. would you like- to date me?" The words I like you, and date me rang through my head. Really? Another relationship? I guess that'd be fine. "..O-oh! Really? I mean.. I like you too. I'd love to be your girlfriend.." These feelings aren't shared, and they never will be, just to make her happy though. Leafy would grin widely, squeezing my hands . This was the most awkward moment ever. What kind of.. confession was this? Whatever, Pin. Stay in the moment. I'd hug her as she pulled me close.

Once she left, I'd finally get time to myself. Was this a bad idea? Should I really be doing this? It might only make how I feel worse. All for her happiness though, it'll make her feel better with all her work and business stuff. She's a good person, right? She's nice. Right? I don't know. I have an odd feeling that this might not be the best choice.

Your actions have consequences.
